Fitness: ▲▲▲▲▲▲▲ Technique: ▲▲▲▲▲▲▲

Price from: 1 110 €

In a stimulating and supportive environment, your teenagers will benefit from a mountain program focused on sports. Although the main outlines of the program are already defined, the daily activities are collaborative, developed in partnership with your children to grant them enough freedom while guiding them in decision-making. This summer mountain camp for teenagers consists of 3 days of trekking in the Aiguilles Rouges massif, followed by 3 days in the heart of the Mont-Blanc massif on the Glacier du Tour. It ensures your child daily physical activities and a unique high-mountain experience.

Throughout this trip, a real group cohesion will be established, allowing your child to fully experience teamwork during glacier hiking. Values such as trust, mutual assistance, encouragement, respect for others, and risk awareness will be at the core of this experience, representing a significant step towards adulthood! To meet the needs of your children, this camp is led by two mountain professionals specialized in activities with minors, complemented by two additional professionals during glacier activities. This summer camp for teenagers is suitable for both beginners and experienced athletes. Regular practice of endurance sports is necessary.

ITINERARY

Day 1

Barberine - Vieux-Emosson hut

From the reception of the Compagnie des Guides, we join the village of Vallorcine by train. We head towards the Emosson lake, the climb is overlooked by the impressive dam arch. Arriving at the Passet pass (6299ft) we finally discover the Emosson lake and stop on its banks for a picnic. A little more effort and here we are at the Vieil Emosson hut, perched on its rock, where we spend the night.

Positive elevation gain: 3772ft - Negative elevation gain: 984ft

Day 2

Vieux-Emosson hut - Cheval Blanc - Refuge de Loriaz

We first go along the beautiful lake of Viel Emosson then start our climb, first passing by the dinosaur tracks, towards the summit of Cheval Blanc (9288ft) where we can admire a breathtaking view. Perhaps crossing paths with a few ptarmigans camouflaged in the scree, we then reach the Col de la Terrasse (8287ft). The refuge is in sight.

Positive elevation gain: 3116ft - Negative elevation gain: 3444ft

Day 3

Loriaz Refuge - Le Tour

We start our day early in the morning by descending to the Village du Buet (4429ft). From there, we take the path leading to the Col des Posettes (6551ft). From this point, the panorama of the majestic Mont Blanc massif and the Tour glacier is offered to us in all its splendor. The descent is then made by the Ardoisières towards the charming village of Le Tour (4757ft), where we spend the night. Access to the luggage

Positive elevation gain: 2624ft - Negative elevation gain: 4265ft

Day 4

Le Tour - Refuge Albert 1er

This morning, we meet the guides who will accompany us for the next two days. After taking the ski lifts to the Col du Balme, we begin the climb to the Albert 1er refuge (8871ft) located on the edge of the Tour glacier. In the afternoon, we set foot on the glacier to familiarize ourselves with the use of crampons, ice axe and rope. This day promises a total immersion in the essential preparations, adding a practical and safe dimension to our mountain adventure.

Day 5

Tête blanche - Refuge Albert 1er - Le Tour

We leave the refuge with our headlamps just before sunrise! We quickly set foot on the Glacier du Tour and put on our crampons. We climb the glacier gently up to the summit of Tête Blanche (11 489ft). Day 6

Return to Chamonix via Pierre à Bosson

Following the picturesque Petit Balcon Nord trail, we walk to the emblematic site of Pierre à Bosson, where the Argentière glacier occupied its vast expanses 150 years ago, just a few steps away. From this point of view, a real awareness is raised of the impressive glacial melting that has cut the glacier into two distinct parts over time. Continuing our hike, we reach Les Tines, where we opt for public transport to reach Chamonix and the Compagnie des Guides. The return is scheduled for 4:00 p.m.
