SKI TOURING - MONT BLANC

Duration: 3

Fitness: ▲▲▲▲▲ Technique: ▲▲▲▲▲

Price from: 1 635 €

Skiing Mont Blanc is a dream shared by many skiers; this exceptional journey takes you through glacier-covered landscapes, promising unforgettable moments. Ski touring to the summit of Mont Blanc in spring demands far more effort than a summer climb. It requires serious physical preparation and expert skiing skills. To ensure the best conditions for your ascent, we offer a 3-day trip with two overnights at the Grands Mulets hut. This option, which breaks up the descent, allows you to better manage both physical exertion and the effects of altitude. A 2-day ascent is also possible, depending on conditions and your experience. We also offer a one-day ascent; please contact us for more information. Regardless of the option, reservations can only be made by phone or email.

Day 1 : Ascent to the Grands Mulets hut

Departure for the cable car of the Aiguille du Midi - we stop on the first stretch: the Plan de l'Aiguille (2 310m). We begin the crossing on the old trail in the direction of the old "glaciers cable car". We continue our progress until the junction between the glacier of Bossons and the glacier of Tacconnaz. The refuge of the Grands Mulets appears in this majestic setting, nestled on a rocky promontory in the heart of the high mountain. Overnight at the Grands Mulets refuge (3 051m). Vertical ascent: 950m

Day 2 : Summit then back to the Grands Mulets hut

At first light, we start from the hut. Classic route "Des plateaux" or depending the conditions, the north face of Dôme du Goûter (slopes up to 40°) to reach the normal route. Ski up until Abri Vallot (4 362m). From there, depending on conditions, go and back by foot to reach the summit through Arête des Bosses. If the conditions are good, we can be skied on the north face. Then, in any way, we continue to go down through Grand & Petit plateau to reach the hut. Vertical ascent: 1 750m - Vertical descent: 1 750m

Day 3 : Second part of the descent

We have a late start and go back to Plan de l'Aiguille or ski down to the Mont-Blanc tunnel if snow is sufficient. Vertical descent: 850m or 1 750m
